Jane Kise, Ed.D. is a consultant, coach, and author of over 20 books. She founded Differentiated Coaching Associates to increase leadership effectiveness. She works with business and education leaders and their teams to improve communication, collaboration, conflict resolution, and change management—the four “big C’s” of her organizational consulting.

Jane’s skill as a motivational speaker is evident in the fact that she has keynoted multiple times at the Australian, New Zealand, and European Associations for Psychological Type conferences, as well as at instructional coaching conferences and other events around the world. She is a recognized expert on psychological type, a framework for helping people understand and work with differences.

She is a past president of the Association for Psychological Type International and a recipient of several awards for research and leadership. Her clients include Minneapolis Public Schools, the Pennsylvania and Minnesota Departments of Education, Twin Cities Public Television, NASA, ConAgra and the Bush Foundation. Her TEDx talk, Neuroscience, Jungian Type and Mathematics: Insights into Student Struggles, has been seen by thousands of viewers.

Jane’s background spans the worlds of government, business, and education organizations. From her Federal Reserve Bank presentations on off-balance-sheet risk, to strategic planning workshops, to LifeKeys seminars that help people find meaning, to in-depth workshops for educators, to guiding teams in using their differences of opinion to make better decisions, she focuses on creating enjoyable, effective learning experiences for everyone.

With her humorous yet insightful and interactive presentations that reach all learning styles, Jane will help your audience better understand themselves, those with whom they interact, and what they are trying to accomplish.
